WHY YOUNG PEOPLE ARE NEEDED IN TEMPERANCE WORK.

(The following is an original paper read before a meeting of the Barton W. C. T. U., Jan. 12.)

That no work which does not appeal to the young life of our land can long survive, is a truth so obvious that he who runs may read. Consequently, every organization, every society, every organization, must fill its ranks with young men and young women. Not only are they needed to take the places of the older ones, who, in a little while will have passed from the stage of action, but because of the faith and enthusiasm that characterize youth and early life. Herein lies the reason why so many churches demand young preachers. Invariably they bring to their charges a superabundance of courage and optimism. No matter how difficult the field, no matter though a dozen older and experienced men have failed to bring things to pass there, these young fellows always paint, in fancy, a glowing picture of the wonderful result of their labors. Not having struggled for ten, fifteen, or twenty years against the indifference, the faithlessness, and the pessimism which obtains to a lamentable extent in far too many churches, but which is especially pressing in nearly every rural community, the young minister brings to his flock a spirit of hopefulness and ardor, which has been chilled, perhaps frozen, in the hearts of his older colleagues.

It is fortunate that this is so, for not infrequently men have actually ridden to success on waves of faith and enthusiasm. Many a church, many a cause, moribund, paralyzed, have sprung into newness of life by the infusion of youthful blood and youthful vitality. Happily the temperance movement appeals, very forcefully, to our young people and their services are easily enlisted. Within a comparatively few years the leaders in this cause have been better and more effective methods of work. At one time it was supposed that its most important province was among the adult male classes. Hence, it focused its efforts almost entirely upon men.

The fallacy of this, however, soon became apparent. The magnitude of the task of reforming men upon whose shoulders rested the chains of habit, welded, perhaps, by years of indulgence, was realized. Then the light broke in. The nation must be reformed, if reformed at all, through the rising generations. Upon the children, the men and women of tomorrow, the temperance cause fixed its hopes. Let them be taught the principles of sobriety and right living; let the harmful effects of alcoholic liquors be impressed upon their plastic minds; let their eyes be opened to the blighting, blasting power of intemperance; lead them into the army warring against king alcohol, and the work of reformation would be complete.

The day that the new and brighter vision burst upon the view of the temperance forces marked a new era in their history. While it has never relaxed its efforts to reclaim men and women, it has bravely and boldly gone into the realm of childhood and youth to educate and enlighten along its own specific lines.

A few generations have passed through the training process and, lo! what a marvelous transformation has been wrought. Gradually the attitude toward intemperance has changed until today the rising generation is its sworn enemy, ready to fight it tooth and nail.

Young people are needed not only because of the inspiration they bring to the older ones, but because of the fact that their children will soon be the teachers, physicians, nurses, statesmen, judges, law-makers, voters. In their keeping will rest the interests of our land and nation. How important is it that they may be men and women of the highest type.

Some one has said (and who will dispute it?) "The training of a child should begin twenty years before its birth." Then to make the coming generations pure, noble, true, means that the future mothers and fathers must now be taught the great responsibility that is theirs. Their progeny and alcohol should be carefully explained, since the taste for the accursed stuff may be inherited.

Let the temperance forces build a wall around the parents of tomorrow. It can be done by tactful and wise instruction.

Again, young people are needed in temperance work because of their influence. How this silent, unseen force is moulding and shaping human destiny! Every life that touches another is either helped or hindered. If only the influence of the young people can be directed aright, scores of lives will be blessed and brightened and led into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Still again, young people are needed in temperance work because, as I have already said, they will be the voters tomorrow, both the boys and the girls, for equal suffrage is only a question of a few years, and if the effects of alcohol upon their own bodies and upon their unborn children are clearly understood, they will vote it out of the state and nation.

Victor Hugo says: "He who has seen the misery of man only, has seen nothing; he must see the misery of woman; he who has seen the misery of woman only, has seen nothing; he must see the misery of childhood."

The father drinks and the light of intellect is snuffed out in the brain of the child. The father drinks and the child shivers through the streets in the rags of penury. The father drinks and the child, terror-cursed, cowers and cringes in the corner. The father drinks and the inquisition lives in the hell-shocking crucifixes of the child, imbruted from cradlehood, hangs its head in shame before the world.

"Ye favored ones who tread the nation's halls,
Hark to the cry of millions yet to be,
Upon whose head the present sins must fall;
Guard well those future men."

The Dead Soldier.

(Rev. Dr. Ozora S. Davis, Pres. Chicago Theological Seminary and a native of Glover.)

Before Liege the ground is waste and torn;
Upon the field, stark dead, a soldier lies;
His uniform is red and rent and worn,
The dust is blown across his sightless eyes
That stare as they meet death in swift surprise.

The soldier's hands have stiffened in their grip;
One on his gun, the other on the ground;
The curl of hate is on his livid lip;
For him the bursting shell shall make no sound;
Unnamed, unmarked shall be his burial-mound.

Glad was the heart of the mother,
As she cuddled her boy to rest,
And his tiny hands pressed warmly
The wealth of her ample breast.

Proudly she saw him toddle
From table to kitchen chair;
And she marked how the sunshine
Gilded With splendor her baby's hair.

Was it for this she bore him?
Kings and commanders, say!
For the baby's hands are stiffened
In death at Liege today.

Beside his bench the sturdy workman stands,
His tools are wielded by his stalwart hands,
His products win the wealth of far-off lands.

Rejoicing in his tasks, he toils and sings,
He builds the commonwealth of useful things
That undergirds the passing pomp of kings.

Today before Liege those hands are cold;
A tide of murder o'er the meadows rolled,
And peaceful labor's funeral knell was tolled.

Warm were the winds of April,
Soft was the summer night,
As the pair of village lovers,
Strolled in the waning light.

Fair was their shining vision,
Good were the waiting years,
And neither had room to harbor
Forecast of bitter tears.

Simple and true and tender,
Loving and unafraid,
In the village among the mountains
The workman won the maid.

Never again the pressure,
Never the close, warm breath;
The hands of the brave young husband
Are stiff in the chill of death.

It was a fortnight yesterday
When the glittering regiment marched away.

A trembling woman stood close by,
Holding him up, so high, so high,
Her laughing boy, that father might wave.

His last farewell—so brave—so brave—
To lad and mother, too, proud to cry,
Swinging his hand: Goodby—goodby.

Hands that waved to mother and child
Clutch at the rifle, by blood defiled.

Is it worth while? Let the orphan say!
This is the price that the red kings pay.

MEXICO MUST HEED WARNING

Washington May Otherwise Adopt Extreme Measures

NEW NOTE IS SENT CARRANZA

American Government Losing Patience With His Indifference to Objectionable Acts of Obregon—Cruiser Tacoma Ordered to Vera Cruz—Story of Exiled Priests

New and urgent representations, amounting practically to a warning, have been sent by the United States to General Carranza demanding an improvement of conditions in Mexico City.

Diplomats familiar with the contents of the note which American Consul Silliman has been instructed to present to Carranza interpret it as an entire change of policy on the part of the Washington government toward the Mexican situation.

Word has been received from Mexico City that priests have been persecuted and Catholic institutions plundered.

The communication to Carranza, which was drafted after conferences between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and Counsellor Lansing, was guarded with secrecy, pending some word from Carranza as to his attitude.

It was said by officials that the note contained the strongest representations that ever have been made to Carranza and indicates that the American government is losing patience with his indifference to the objectionable acts of General Obregon at Mexico City.

Those who know the contents of the communication said it was not in the nature of an ultimatum, but pointed out in explicit language that serious consequences might follow if the welfare of foreigners continued to be disregarded.

The cruiser Tacoma has been ordered from Port au Prince, Haiti, to Vera Cruz. Further movements of vessels may be decided upon.

After a conference last night between Secretary Daniels and the president, it was learned on high authority that two or more battleships would be ordered from Guantanamo to Vera Cruz.

In diplomatic quarters there were more manifestations of concern over the Mexican situation than at any time since the American forces were landed at Vera Cruz. The foreign diplomats conferred among themselves and communicated to one another the latest developments.

Just what move is now contemplated is known only to President Wilson and a few of his closest advisers, but it was apparent from the attitude of the officials that it was realized that a new crisis was at hand which might have to be met with strong measures.

The plight of Americans has been of increasing concern. There are more United States citizens in Mexico City than of any other country.

Priests Harshly Treated
More than 100 refugees arrived at New Orleans on the steamship Texas from Vera Cruz. Nearly all were from Mexico City, where they fled.

In the party were six nuns and eight priests. These were met by Rt. Rev. Jose Mora del Rio, archbishop of Mexico, who reached New Orleans with a party of churchmen several days ago. All fled without baggage, and say they are thankful they escaped with their lives.

The archbishop gave out this story of the nuns and priests:

"Every priest in Mexico City and surrounding territory has been expelled or put in prison. Not a church or institution remains open, and nearly all have been sacked or desecrated. Our priests have been robbed and at the point of guns driven from their sanctuaries."

"The soldiers left nothing of value. These sisters and nuns are homeless and made their way to Vera Cruz with the greatest hardships. They feel that they would be sealing the death warrant to those still in Mexico if they went into details of the horrors that our men and women have been subjected to."

The explosion of a 50 gallon gasoline tank at the residence of Fred D. Gilman, St. Johnsbury, Tuesday night March 2, caused a spectacular fire and for a few minutes threatened grave danger. A quantity of baled hay burned and the residences of Mr. Gilman and his brother, adjoining, caught fire several times. The cause of the explosion is unknown. As gasoline was being drawn from the buried tank, it suddenly exploded.

The recital given in the academy auditorium Feb. 26 by the musical organizations of the St. Johnsbury schools was one of the most enjoyable ever given, and was thoroughly appreciated by an audience of about 300 people. The four numbers by the chorus of nearly 100 voices were given with such spirit and enthusiasm and were enthusiastically applauded. The boys' and girls' glee clubs, which were heard for the first time, proved themselves very entertaining. A number by both clubs receiving encores, and one number by the boys' club a double encore.
